

Aliso Fire

The Aliso Fire ignited June 2, 2018 and burned approximately 175 acres of sensitive habitat inside Aliso and Wood Canyons Wilderness Park. Areas damaged by the fire will remain closed to allow them to recover.

Aliso and Wood Canyons Wilderness Park

Trails Closed:

Coyote Run (South of Rock-It)

Dripping Cave

Nature Loop

The Wilderness is Healing

The blackened hillsides may appear lifeless; however, natural recovery is already underway. The ash contains rich nutrients that will aid habitat regeneration.

Aliso and Wood Canyons Wilderness Park, June 5, 2018

What Can I Do?

Stay Out of Burned Areas

Please respect closure notices. Some areas are still unsafe for visitors. Additionally, premature access could increase erosion, damage recovering plants, and further traumatize displaced animals.

Be Patient

Land managers are working to reopen the parks and trails for public access as soon as it is safe and feasible for visitors and habitat.

Follow OC Parks for updates and information about closures and recovery.

@OCParks

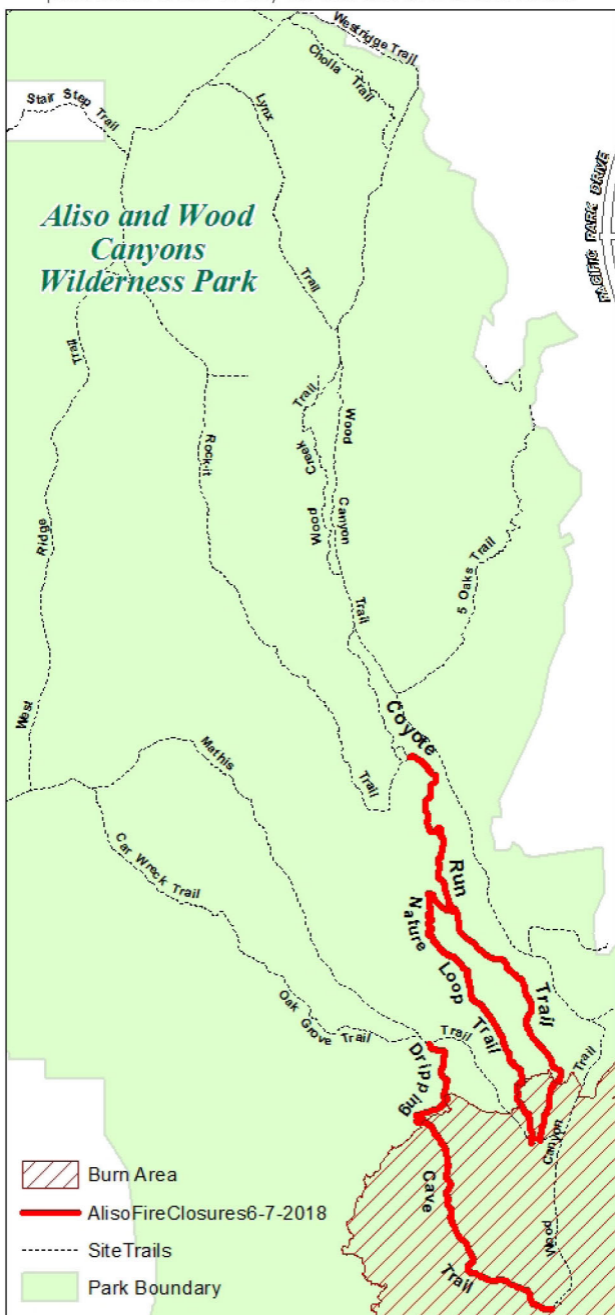

OrangeCountyParks

ocparks.com

Aliso Fire Closures

Please help your park recover by staying on designated trails and honoring trail closures. For public safety, please let the park office know of any off-trail use at 949-923-2200.

Trespassers in closed areas are subject to citation (OCCO 2-5-46).